Other signs also point to a rising market. One is adissolution of the a. United States Grain corporation June 30.

The grain corporation, thru its ability to buy, sell, or store large quantities of wheat, has power to control prices to a large extent. Many farmers contend it deliberately has kept down wheat prices. Senators and congress, men from agricultural states today predicted dissolution of the corporation would bring sudden increases in prices.

Two factors, however, may tend to keep prices at their present level. These are fluctuating foreign exchange rates which will restrict foreign buying of American wheat, and a big carryover of 1919 wheat, announced today by the agriculture department.

The carryover is placed at 150,000,-000 bushels or about 50 per cent more than the normal pre-war carryover. The department qualified its announcement by warning that much of the carryover wheat is of low grade, which will mill poorly.
